ON 1 July this year, the Australian Government’s new aged care standards kicked in. These new standards were possibly even fluffier and open to interpretation than the ones they replaced.

In evidence at the Aged Care Royal Commission, CPSA described the new standards as “a sad piece of window dressing”.

It appears GPs working in aged care agree with that verdict. The Royal Australian College of General Practitioners (RACGP) has developed its own aged care standards. With superb understatement the RACGP is reported to believe ‘the new [RACGP] standards address an area of aged care that is currently underserved’.

Just the one area?

Dr Louise Acland, Chair of the RACGP Expert Committee – Standards for General Practices (REC–SGP), is reported to have said: “It’s a very complex sector and there’s a need for more support so that our older Australians living in residential aged care facilities can access general practice care in a timely, appropriate and safe manner.”

RACGP President Dr Harry Nespolon has said GPs do not receive enough support when treating patients in nursing homes.

The new RACGP standards are designed to generate change, including improvements to systems and equipment that in many cases do not support the safe and effective delivery of care.

Things have come to a pretty pass if GPs have to develop their own aged care standards for nursing homes, because the Australian Government’s standards are not up to the job.

Cashless Welfare Card for Pensioners?

I AM an 82-year old widow and an Age Pensioner! I only survive thanks to the pension.

Immediately before the last election, I watched a media interview with the then Minister responsible for social security. He said that all social security payments including Age and Veteran Pensions will be made by the cashless welfare card commencing in 2020.

I was both stunned and horrified! My fear is that it will be brought on very suddenly.

I am really depressed at the thought of this card controlling how and where I spend my money with no freedom at all and very little cash allowed.

The aged will never cope with this. Many don’t even use EFTPOS cards and just withdraw money from the bank with passbooks.

There needs to be an outcry against this humiliating, stressful and demeaning change to the lifestyle of the vulnerable aged.

Having read many horrific demeaning stories of hardship the cashless welfare card has caused, I appeal to CPSA to do something.

EXCELLENT articles on health insurance and apartments (THE VOICE, August 2019).

Smelling a RAD

THIS is to ask you for an article on a subject that will be of great interest to many of your readers, the Refundable Accommodation Deposit, the inescapable and eye-watering, mandatory RAD for nursing homes. In many cases, this is $500,000 or more! How do people cope?

Some questions occur to me that perhaps could be answered in one of your thorough articles. Here are some:

When I first started researching nursing homes some five years ago the RAD was already in place. I just accepted it along with other expenses like the Daily Accommodation Fee and the Daily Care Fee. It was just a given.

I can understand it better when it is called the Bond. This implies that the Institution can draw on it if the other payments aren’t made. My guess is that this would only happen in a very few cases, but the money is there 100 per cent of the time. What for?

Setting the RAD amount seems like a case of think-of-a-number. Who sets it? Based on what? Lucky me, the RAD was ‘only’ $150,000, but people in my Carers Group have paid $700,000!! I am told that the average is $500,000!

Quite often people have no option but to sell their house to find the money! That’s a tragedy. We were able to raid our DIY Super Fund. (We only had to find $150,000.) And, as the RAD doesn’t count as an asset, our pensions went up a bit. Alzheimer’s is a terminal disease. When my lovely wife dies, the money will be returned. Gee, thanks. I would rather some of it be spent making her life better while she is alive.

NSW palliative care update

A COLLEAGUE and I had a very good meeting with NSW Health Minister Brad Hazzard recently. Going in, we had a long list of things to tell him and request - to which he listened intently and fired off orders to his staff.

This included our questions about the Western Sydney Silver Chain project, funds for palliative physician trainees, as well as transitional palliative physician positions for adolescent and young adult patients.

Our main focus, however, was on three areas which we would like to see addressed in this term of Government, namely:

• Specialist palliative care establishment for all acute care;
• Specialist in-patient units in many areas including Westmead, Nepean, Prince of Wales Hospital, Wyong, Broken Hill and Campbelltown;
• Specialist palliative care nurses into residential aged care facilities.

I am fired up for the next four years of this government in NSW. There is so much good that they could do, if they just understand where the needs are.

Yes, we grandparents CAN!

CHILDREN around the world are to be congratulated for the many protests they have organised in order to voice their concerns about inaction around climate change. Like it or not, the warming of the earth is the biggest issue of our times. We older citizens must join with the young ones. It is they who will be affected the most.

What kind of world are we leaving them?

Their concerns about climate change have led me to join a NSW group called Grandparents for Climate Action Now (CAN), which supports students going on strike to draw attention to the problem of climate change and demand action. I hope that senior citizens in all parts of Australia will feel encouraged to show support for our brave grandchildren. Join groups like CAN or start up your own group.

Measly pension and Newstart indexations

LAST month, indexation was applied to all social security payments, including the Age Pension, Disability Support Pension, Carer Payment and Newstart.

The pension went up $7.20 a fortnight to $933.40 for singles.

For couples, the pension went up $10.80 a fortnight to $1,407.

Singles on Newstart, receive $3.30 more a fortnight and will now get $567.80 in total.

Newstart for couples went up by $6 a fortnight. They will now get $1025.20 in total.

Poor wages growth in the economy means that the pension was indexed on the basis of inflation, which is very low.

Newstart is always indexed on the basis of inflation.

GPs and pharmacists fight it out

DOCTORS wanting to be pharmacists and pharmacists wanting to be doctors, that’s the turf war currently exercising minds at the Pharmacy Guild and the Australian Medical Association (AMA).

The Pharmacy Guild has suggested that pharmacists should be able to give vaccinations and provide medical consultations and, very importantly, be paid under Medicare for doing so.

The AMA has countered by saying that pharmacists don’t have the skills and experience to do this.

The AMA also said that GPs should be able to run a pharmacy alongside their practice.

The latter suggestion has thrown the Pharmacy Guild in a tizz. One of the main concerns of the Pharmacy Guild is to protect its members from competition. If GPs were allowed to own and operate pharmacies, the Guild thundered, they would have a conflict of interest and over-prescribe.

Arguably, simple vaccinations and medical consultations by pharmacists would benefit health consumers in rural and regional areas, particularly in those areas where GPs are scarce.

Also arguably, this wouldn’t be unfair, because there’s no overall shortage of GPs in Australia. It’s just that GPs overwhelmingly are not that keen to live and work in rural and regional areas.

However, numerous inquiries have concluded that the current pharmacy rules are anti-competitive and should be overhauled.

The federal Health Minister is negotiating a new Community Pharmacy Agreement to govern the sector from mid-2020.

Say ‘No’ to the mindless welfare card

PENSIONERS can rest easy. They won’t be affected by the cashless welfare card, which the Australian Government is considering for a nationwide roll-out. The Prime Minister is on record as saying that it would target the under-30s on Newstart and those on Youth Allowance.

The other idea floated by the Australian Government is alcohol and drug testing for the same group of people.

It seems an odd obsession. The Australian Government assumes that anyone under-30 who is not working is likely to have an alcohol and/or drug problem and will not spend their social security payment wisely.

It is also odd how the Australian Government seems to think that by humiliating people already feeling low because they’re out of a job and dirt-poor, these people will be caused to grow a backbone, beat addiction and find a job.

While pensioners will not be saddled with a cashless welfare card and escape drug and alcohol testing on pension day, it is quite possible that older people on Newstart will one day be exposed to these ill-advised measures. It’s for people under-30 now, but that’s an arbitrary age limit.

At the same time, pensioners need to remind themselves that pensions are regulated under the same Act of Parliament and paid by the same agency as Newstart and Youth Allowance. There are other stingy, mean measures like the cashless welfare card available to policy makers.

Beating the cashless welfare card now will prevent other mad ideas getting up later.

$800 pensioner bonus?

Deeming changes from 20 September

WITH much fanfare, the Australian Government announced that lowering the deeming rates would mean an $800 pensioner bonus.

According to documents released under Freedom of Information, the number of pensioners on the couples rate who will secure $800 under the deeming rate changes total just 191 couples across Australia.

These are non home-owning part-pensioner couples with financial assets of $605,000.

When the deeming rate issue was running hot, Social Services Minister Anne Ruston repeatedly refused to provide the breakdown of how many pensioners will secure the $800 maximum payout. Now we know why.

The same Freedom of Information documents show that the average benefit for part pensioners is just under $5 a week ($249 a year) for singles. For couples, the average payment under the deeming rate change is $3 a week ($156 a year). So the Government’s announcement about an $800 pensioner bonus was just spin.

The new deeming rates take effect on 20 September 2019, but chances are that you won’t notice much of a difference in your pension payment beyond the indexation amount.

Aged Care Royal Commission six month extension

THE AUSTRALIAN Government has extended the Royal Commission into Aged Care Quality and Safety for an additional six months. The Commission requested an extension to continue hearing evidence from Australians and to conduct its deliberations.

As a result the due date of the Commission’s final report has been postponed until 12 November 2020. An interim report from the Commission will be due at the same date of 31 October 2019.

The Commission will continue to accept submissions until the end of April 2020.

In addition to the six month extension the Commission has also appointed former Federal Court judge Tony Pagone QC as the third Royal Commissioner.

Mr Pagone is a specialist in Taxation Law. He was the first Special Counsel to the Australian Tax Office and has served on several Council Boards that have a focus on justice such as the Victorian Council of Civil Liberties.

Clearly Mr Pagone has a strong interest in justice and an impressive CV. It will be interesting to see what he will make of the evidence from the Royal Commission.

The additional time and expertise of Mr Pagone will be beneficial in allowing the Commission to leave no stone unturned.

However, the aged care system could be improved right now. It is not necessary for the Government to wait for the Commission’s final report before acting on obvious issues that plague the aged care sector.
More niggly savings at the expense of older Australians

THE AUSTRALIAN Government has re-introduced draft legislation (1) to make going overseas more expensive for pensioners, (2) to make people going on Newstart wait double the time, and (3) to make it harder to get the pension at all for migrants.

The proposed measures are harsh but not new. They’re left-over business from the previous parliament.

First, at the moment a pensioner can go overseas for longer than six weeks and lose some of their pension supplement but keep the basic amount of the pension supplement.

The basic amount is compensation introduced with the GST back in 2000. From 1 January 2020, the Government plans to stop paying pensioners going overseas for longer than six weeks the basic amount, reducing their fortnightly pension payment by $23.80 (singles) and $39.20 (couples).

The Government’s reasoning is that you don’t pay GST while overseas. Go figure.

Second, anyone applying for Newstart with savings in excess of $5,000 is expected to use those savings while waiting a maximum of 13 weeks for their first Newstart payment. The Government plans to double that, so that instead of one quarter, people will now have to wait half a year.

No justification has been provided. Obviously, living without money coming in for 13 weeks is hard enough but it’s even harder for 26 weeks.

Third, the Australian residency requirement for the Age Pension and Disability Support Pension (DSP) is for ten years, with five of those years continuous between the ages of 16 and 65.

The Government wants to change this to 10 years continuous Australian residency. Five of those years must be during a person’s working life. Alternatively, five years all up must have been while the person was not in receipt of an unemployment benefit.

The justification given is that everyone is expected to work. However, if this becomes law, there could be people who end up with nothing to live on except Special Benefit. The Special Benefit payment equals the Newstart payment, a lot less than the pension.

Together, these measures are estimated to improve the budget bottom line by $292 million over the forward estimates.

CPSA has written to the Opposition and the crossbenches in both Houses to protest the unfairness of these measures.

Parramatta nursing home does some backsliding

IT used to be called Ark Health Care Parramatta before this for-profit nursing home was sold to Anglican Community Services, which runs it as a not-for-profit nursing home. It’s now called Thomas Street Lodge.

The reason this nursing home was sold was that Ark Health Care had made an almighty mess of care and lost accreditation for the home on 21 July 2018. Ark Health Care Parramatta failed 43 of the 44 standards. Famously, the only standard it did meet was: ‘planning and leadership’.

Surely, a faith-based, not-for-profit provider would do a better job?

Anglican Community Services took over a mess, but by 22 November 2018 Thomas Street Lodge met all 44 standards. Well done!

Now, however, nurses at Thomas Street Lodge fear residents’ care and safety will be compromised again following a restructure to cut overall nursing and care staff at the facility, according to the NSW Nurses and Midwives’ Association (NSWNMA).

The NSWNMA were advised last month of Anglican Community Services’ plan to reduce registered nurse hours by 34 per cent and carer hours by 10 per cent. In other words, Anglican Community Services is cutting back on all direct care staff, including registered nurse hours by one-third.

Back to the bad old ways?

“Our members have highlighted that daily showers or bath routines would be impacted, along with residents’ meal times”, said Brett Holmes, the NSWNMA’s General Secretary.

“Members have also expressed concerns for those residents who require observations every 15 minutes and others who require assistance to be turned every two hours to avoid pressure sores. The highly specialised nursing care provided to these acutely unwell residents cannot be underestimated”, he continued.

Thomas Street Lodge is accredited until 21 January 2022, but it might be a good idea for the regulator to hit the home with a bout of spot checks sooner than that.

‘Sensitive’ groups next on Robodebt’s radar

THE DEPARTMENT of Human Services, which looks after Centrelink, has a computer program officially called the Online Compliance Intervention and referred to by its critics as Robodebt. This computer program can check the data of other government agencies such as the Australian Tax Office (ATO) and compare it with Centrelink data to see if what you have reported to Centrelink is the same as what was reported to the ATO.

If the computer notices any discrepancies, you will be sent a please-explain letter. This letter will ask you to either prove the debt is a mistake or pay the debt. The onus is on you to prove that you do not owe the debt which may have occurred as long as seven years ago.

If you can’t prove the debt is incorrect, it is assumed the debt exists and private debt collectors may be employed to collect the money Centrelink thinks it is owed. Robodebt has been making headlines again recently as the Australian Government plans to expand the scheme to ‘sensitive’ groups. Sensitive groups include those aged 65 and over, people living in remote areas, the homeless and people with disabilities on the Disability Support Pension.

Robodebt has been reported to have approximately a 20 per cent error rate. This means that one-in-five debts are not debts at all. That’s a frightening error rate. Errors mainly occur due to income changes and the fact that Robodebt averages annual income data from the tax office. If you have more income in some weeks than in others, averaging out Pension payments creates an impression that you were earning more than you declared to Centrelink in the weeks your income was lower than that average.

In order to avoid Robodebt errors, you must notify Centrelink within 14 days of changes in your circumstances. A change in circumstances can affect your payment and if you are earning more than you are entitled to you will be required to return these funds.

A change in circumstances for Age Pensioners includes income and asset valuations, an overseas trip for more than 6 weeks, marital status or relationship, or death of a partner.

The Government’s race to be back in the black is on and it appears it will do whatever it takes to achieve a budget surplus.

The Refundable Accommodation Deposit explained

THE refundable Accommodation Deposit (RAD) is an interest-free loan from the resident to the nursing home. The provider is free to invest the deposit and keep the returns as rent.

The RAD is paid in a lump sum. In 2017-18 the average RAD paid was $303,000. The maximum charge for a RAD is currently $550,000.

Nursing homes use local house prices to guide them in determining the size of a RAD.

Residential aged care facilities were given the ability to charge lump sum accommodation bonds from October 1997.

Initially the lump sum was only paid by residents deemed as requiring ‘low care’. Lump sums could not be charged to residents requiring ‘low care’. Lump sums could not be charged to residents requiring ‘low care’.

RN 24/7 for one more year

VICTORIA is the only state to have mandatory nursing staff ratios (in Victorian Government nursing homes), but NSW is the only state that requires nursing homes to have a Registered Nurse on duty at all times.

The NSW requirement originally applied to ‘high care’ nursing homes only, not to ‘low care’ nursing homes. When that distinction was abolished by the Australian Government in 2014, the NSW Public Health Regulation 2012 was changed. Any nursing home that was a ‘high care’ nursing home before 2014 would still be required to have a Registered Nurse on duty at all times.

But that was to end with the expiry of the Public Health Regulation 2012 in 2017.

However, the Public Health Regulation has been held over for twelve months a few times. It has again been held over for twelve months this year, until 1 September 2020.

It may just be coincidence, but by then the Aged Care Royal Commission will have almost completed its final report. The Royal Commission is likely to make recommendations about nursing home staffing. Might it be that the NSW Government is holding off for that purpose?

Difficult to say, but what can be assumed is that the NSW requirement for a Registered Nurse to be on duty in nursing homes at all times is not being policed. It’s a requirement in name only.

with ‘high care’ needs. On July 1 2014, the distinction between low and high care was abolished and the RAD was born.

Every resident in aged care, regardless of their care needs, is now required to pay accommodation fees if they have the financial ability to do so.

The RAD is not the only way to pay for accommodation. You can also pay a daily fee called the Daily Accommodation Payment (DAP), or you may pay a combination of the RAD and the DAP.

RADs and DAPs are how nursing home proprietors make a large proportion of their profits. Just have a look at Bupa Aged Care Australia. In 2017 Bupa recorded $663 million in profits.

When a resident leaves, the RAD must be returned to them or to their estate. The Australian Government guarantees to pay the RAD back if a provider becomes bankrupt or insolvent.

The problem with the basic funeral from the regulations was reasonable as not all funeral directors offer a basic funeral but they do all have a least expensive package.

CPSA argued in its submission on the public consultation draft for the NSW Fair Trading Regulation that offering a least expensive funeral package will not do much in assisting consumers deciding between the affordability and dignity of a funeral service.

The new requirements will commence on 1 February 2020. Despite the disappointing change in regulation, CPSA remains committed to campaigning for a basic funeral which is price-regulated and which must be offered by all NSW funeral providers.

CRACKDOWN ON ELDER ABUSE
THE NSW Ageing and Disability Commissioner has warned retirement village operators that they have a responsibility under the law to prevent elder abuse.

During a speech at the Retirement Living Council’s annual NSW conference, the Commissioner stated that retirement village operators must prove that they can be trusted.

At the same conference Kathryn Greiner, the NSW Government’s retirement village ambassador, said that if retirement villages want to stamp out abuse and enhance care it needs to start at the top. However, Ms Greiner said that when things go wrong and the message goes up “there is nobody home”.

Meanwhile, the ACT is legislating to make elder abuse a crime. ACT Attorney-General Gordon Ramsay said, “We have started working on a proposed specific criminal offence relating to elder abuse in the ACT”.

ACT’s proposed elder abuse legislation has been compared to laws protecting victims of domestic violence and police and ambulance officers. These are existing laws that protect vulnerable people in the community. An elder abuse law would specifically protect vulnerable older people in the ACT.

The new requirements will

Basic funeral dead and buried
NEW funeral pricing regulation in NSW attempts to provide greater transparency for the costs of a funeral, but fails to impose a duty on providers to offer an essential service at an affordable price.

Under the new standards every funeral director will be required to provide the price of their “least expensive funeral package”. Funeral directors will have to clearly display this information at each place of business and on any public website maintained by them.

These least-expensive-funeral-package requirements will replace the basic funeral.

A basic funeral consists of the arrangement and conduct of a funeral service, transport of the deceased to a cemetery or crematorium, the least expensive coffin, compulsory medical certificates and a burial or cremation.

The new requirements will commence on 1 February 2020. Despite the disappointing change in regulation, CPSA remains committed to campaigning for a basic funeral which is price-regulated and which must be offered by all NSW funeral providers.

TERM DEPOSITS: GOOD OR BAD?

Are you retired and addicted to term deposits? This is the title of a new booklet produced by CPSA to shine a light on the truth about term deposits.

Interest rates are at all-time lows. Term deposit rates don’t even match the higher deeming rate of 3%. Times are tough for pensioners who have always had their money in term deposits.

If you are one of those pensioners, if you think term deposits are ‘no risk’, if you think investing in shares is a casino, and if you think there aren’t any financial planners who can be trusted, this booklet is something you should read.

Are you retired and addicted to term deposits? is a free booklet. It offers a comparison of the returns on term deposits and shares in the ten years from October 2007, just before the Global Financial Crisis hit. And guess what? Shares did better than term deposits.

If you want to know the long and the short of it, contact CPSA Head Office on 1800 451 488 for a copy of Are you retired and addicted to term deposits? We can send you a copy via email or in the post.
